September is marked National Suicide Prevention Month in order to shift public perception about suicide, raise awareness about the growing problem, share vital information to people affected by suicide, ensure people struggling have the resources to seek help, and most importantly, spread hope. You are not alone. Take the time this month to join the fight against suicide.

How you can join the fight against suicide

Be aware of emergency hotlines: call or text 988 in a crisis

Advocate for mental health

Check up on the people around you

Be aware of Texas A&M's mental health and counseling resources: <https://uhs.tamu.edu/mental-health>

Help end the stigma and raise awareness

Join The Office of Sustainability & Campus Enrichment in officially welcoming their Fall 2024 cohort of interns!

Kimberly Kendall, Matthew Santiago, Michael Asokwah, Ellie Wicks, Amrita Gabu, Peyton Braun, Alyssa Rodriguez, Kaitlyn Alton

What made you want to apply for this internship?

“I was excited to work with peers who are also passionate about the environment and sustainability like I am, as well as gain knowledge in sustainability outreach and talking to people on campus.”

Ellie Wicks, Bioenvironmental Sciences major

“I wanted the experience of working with a team, going out and talking to people, and learning how to communicate and talk about climate change with people.”

Kaitlyn Alton, Environmental Studies major
